

Change your Perspective

Situation: It has recently come to the attention of the Fairy Commission for Fair Representation that a number of fairy tale villains lacked proper representation at their trial before the readers. New testimony has been discovered and your team (Level Pumpkin Agents at the Commission) have been tasked with reviewing statements and testimony to determine if the cases need to be re-opened and if the Commission should consider a pardon.

As you review the case evidence you will document the changes you see from one version to the next in the chart below. You will consider:

- What is the effect of point of view or perspective in a story?
- Which side is more believable? Why?

You will write a final report determining your opinion of the case and if a breach of representation has occurred. You will also list and explain any new witnesses that you would like to interview. Remember you must provide text evidence to support your team's findings. Good luck ☺

Write your team's final report on a sheet of notebook paper. You must include answers to the following questions:

1. Which story do you think is more believable? Who do you think is the real villain? Why? (Use textual evidence to support your answer.)
2. What witnesses would you like to interview next and why?
3. Is the ending of the story changed significantly by the new point of view? How? (textual evidence)
4. Should the case be re-opened? Why?
